NOVEMBER MARRIAGES

FALLING IN STEP TO STRAINS OF THE WEDDING MARCH

Happy Brides and Grooms of the Country Are Well Known to Our People.

REIFSNIDER—MUNROE—At the home of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Munroe, Annapolis, Miss Mary Louise Munroe, their second daughter, became the bride of Ensign Lawrence Fairfax Reifsnider, of the U. S. Navy, of Westminster, Wednesday afternoon of last week.

Because of sorrow and death in the family of the bride, whose sister's husband, Lieut. Donald P. Morrison, was recently killed in the disastrous explosion aboard the torpedo boat destroyer, Walke, and illness of bridegroom's father Judge Reifsnider, the wedding was witnessed only by the immediate families of the young couple and a few close personal friends.

To the strains of Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus, played by Lieut. C. A. Zimmerman, bandmaster at the Naval Academy, the bride descended the stairway, which was a bower of yellow chrysanthemums and ferns, with her father, Hon. James M. Munroe, of the Annapolis bar, who gave his daughter in marriage.

The bride was met at an improvised altar of chrysanthemums and ferns by the groom and his best man, Ensign Frank M. Harris, U. S. N., of Tennessee. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Joseph P. McComas, rector of St. Anne's.

The bride, a handsome brunette, wore an elegant traveling costume of golden brown Zibeline trimmed in brocade, with hat to match. She carried an armful of yellow chrysanthemums.

After the ceremony Ensign and Mrs. Reifsnider left for a wedding trip, the groom later to join his ship, the U. S. S. Rhode Island. The bride is a grand-niece of Jesse Walter of this place.

BASS—SHRIVER—"Immanuel Tidings" a publication by Immanuel Lutheran church, Philadelphia, containing following wedding notice:

"On Wednesday evening, Oct. 23, the wedding bells rang merrily in our church, when Miss Mae Shriver, one of our charming young ladies, was united in marriage to Mr. William Copping Bass.

"Promptly at 8 o'clock, to the strains of Lohengrin, the bridal party came to the altar. Little Lillian Blass, as flower girl, came first, bearing a basket of pink blossoms, strewn some of them in the path of the party. Next came the bridesmaid, Miss Christine Mohrfield, wearing a beautiful pink gown with shower bouquet of roses. She was followed by the bride leaning upon the arm of her father, Mr. David Shriver. They were met at the altar by the groom and his groomsmen, Mr. Drew Boyd. The beautiful Lutheran ring service was used by the pastor, and the sweet strains of "Hearts and Flowers" mingled with the service. The bride looked beautiful in a wedding gown of satin and rare lace. The veil was caught up with lilies of the valley, and she carried a huge shower bouquet of white roses.

"The chancel was banked with palms, and three arches decorated with autumn leaves marked the path of the bridal party. Messrs. Philip Reuber and Walter Koons served as ushers. The church was crowded, with standing room at a premium. After the ceremony a number of the guests repaired to the residence of the bride, 535 S. 52d Street, where congratulations were showered upon the happy couple. The magnificent display of wedding gifts testified to the esteem and love of numerous friends. The decorations at the home carried out the color scheme of pink and white. In the parlor and reception hall pink roses and carnations in cornucopias were artistically arranged, and in the dining room white doves holding pink ribbons were suspended from the ceiling. After refreshments were served the bride and groom left in a much decorated taxi for the train.

"Miss Shriver has been teaching in the West End school for several years and has a host of friends who wish for her and her husband a long life of happiness and prosperity. They will be at home after Dec. 1, at 941 N. 42d Street."

WAGAMAN—MELHORN—At a nuptial high mass in St. Joseph's Catholic church, Bonneauville, Tuesday morning, Nov. 19, Miss Dorothy Marie Melhorn, of New Oxford, and Harry J. Wagaman, of Bonneauville, were married by Rev. Father McIlhenny, pastor of the Catholic church at that place. They were attended by Miss Louise Billman, of New Oxford, and Bernard Wagaman, brother of the groom. The bride wore a steel colored suit with hat to match and carried a shower bouquet of chrysanthemums. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Melhorn, of New Oxford. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L.

Wagaman, of Bonneauville, where a reception was tendered them Tuesday evening. They received many and handsome presents. The newly wedded couple will make their home with the groom's parents for the present.

HORWEDEL—NOEL AND GRUVER—CHAMBERS—The church of the Immaculate Conception in New Oxford was the scene of a double wedding on Tuesday morning of last week, the nuptial mass being celebrated by Rev. Father Shields, Pius Horwedel, of Edge Grove, and Miss Alice A. Noel, of New Oxford, and William Gruver and Miss Mary Chambers, both of New Oxford, were united in marriage.

BREAM—COVER—Roy W. Bream, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Bream, of Fairfield, and Miss Belva Cover, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Cover, of Hamilton township, were married at the Reformed parsonage of this place last Wednesday, November 20, by Dr. T. J. Barkley. The newly wedded couple left on the 4 o'clock train over the Reading for Harrisburg on a short trip.

SMITH—SANDERS—Miss Effie Sanders, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Sanders, of near Bethel Church, and James Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Smith, of Germany township, were married, last Wednesday morning in St. Aloysius' church, Littlestown. Rev. Father Breuninger, performing the ceremony. The bridesmaid was Miss Bessie Sanders, the bride's sister, and the groom's best man was his brother, John Smith. A wedding dinner and reception were held at the home of the bride's parents Wednesday evening and on Thursday a wedding dinner was given them at the groom's home. They will go to house-keeping in the Spring at "Valley Green Farm," owned by William Smith.

HAVERSTOCK—WILDASIN—Irvin Luther Haverstock, of Huntington township, and Miss Annie May Wildasin, of Bernadina, were married at the Methodist parsonage in York Springs by the Rev. A. C. Logan.

FETROW—SHINDEL—Lawrence A. Fetrow and Miss Alice Shindel, of York county, were married by Rev. Franklin E. Taylor at the Presbyterian Manse last Wednesday.

SMITH—SWARTZ—On Nov. 21, in St. Joseph's Church, Hanover, by Rev. Fr. J. A. Huber, Pius Smith of Mt. Rock, and Miss Catharine J. Swartz were united in marriage. The attendants were Miss Rosie Smith and Gregory Neiderer.

HANKEY—STABLEY—On Nov. 21, Miss Nora B. Stabley, daughter of Abraham Stabley and Merli B. Hankey, son of David Hankey, both of this place, were married in Frederick, by Rev. Henri L. G. Kieffer.

The following despatch from Baltimore, Md., appeared in the Philadelphia "North American":

After being told that husband-to-be could not be married without the consent of his parents because he is only 19 years old, Miss Margaret Lawrence, of New Oxford, Pa., left the courthouse today and brought her intended husband back to show the officials what a big boy he was.

Miss Lawrence gave her age as 23 years. She wanted a license to marry Howard C. Spellman, of Baltimore. "He is only 19 years old, but he is big for his age," she told W. T. Kelly, the clerk.

Kelly then rented the law, and ended solemnly with: "He, therefore, cannot obtain a license without the consent of his parents."

Miss Lawrence departed and returned with Spellman.

He is a big fellow, but Kelly refused to issue the license.

G. A. R. Annual Banquet.

On last Wednesday at noon, the annual banquet of Corporal Skelly Post No. 9, G. A. R., was held in the hall on East Middle Street. The banquet room was beautifully decorated with hunting and flags; and it was a most enjoyable occasion, the number present was much smaller than usual.

At one time the Post numbered about 160 members, but through deaths 9 have passed away since the beginning of the year, and changes, the membership has been reduced to 88, and of these, 15 were absent for various reasons.

The guests of honor were Comrades Town, of Philadelphia, Asst. Adj. Gen. of the Dept. of Penna., Rhodes, of Harrisburg, Vice Pres. of the Dept. of Pa., National Custodian of the G. A. R. Records stored in Independence Hall; two veterans from Fairfield, and one from Emmitsburg.

The officers now in charge are: Commander, Wm. A. McIlhenny, Adjutant, Calvin Hamilton; Quartermaster, Hanson W. Lightner, who has efficiently filled that office for thirteen years, and to whom the success of the annual banquets is very largely due.

There were oysters, raw and stewed, roast turkey, with all the usual accompaniments, coffee, bananas, cake, ice cream. The members in Gettysburg who were absent by reason of illness or disability, were remembered with a share of the good things provided.

After dinner a considerable time was spent socially, in the Post Room, and with Comrade Pitzer at the organ, a number of the good old patriotic songs were sung, and much enjoyed by all present. Later, Comrade Pitzer took the violin, and accompanied by Comrade Smith, who manipulated the bones, delightfully contributed very largely to the entertainment. It is said that there is music in everything, if we know how to get it out, and this music was so inspiring that two volunteer couples made several rounds of the room, to the great enjoyment of the audience.

The dinner was prepared and served by the members of Corporal Skelly Post No. 9. It was truly a labor of love, and appreciation was shown to the fullest extent. The two long tables were filled, and as we looked down the lines, we were reminded of Owen Meredith's tribute to cooks:

"O hour of all hours, the most blessed upon earth, Blessed hour of our dinners! The land of his birth: The face of his first love; the bills that he owes: The twaddle of friends, and the venom of foes;

The sermon he heard when to church he last went; The money he borrowed, the money he spent;—

All these things, I believe, a man may forget. And not be the worse for forgetting; but yet, Never, never, oh never! earth's luckiest sinner—

Haah, unpunished, forgotten the hour of his dinner."

"We may live without poetry, music, and art;

We may live without conscience, and live without heart;

We may live without friends, we may live without books;

But civilized man cannot live without cooks."

"He may live without books,—what is knowledge but grieving?

He may live without hope,—what is hope but deceiving?

He may live without love,—what is passion but pining?

But where is the man who can live without dining?"

Work on New Oxford Road.

Work on the pike between New Oxford and Gettysburg is going forward at both ends. Wm. B. Bream is supervising the work in this end and it has advanced from the York pike bridge to a point almost half way to the Camp Meeting Woods. The center of road is torn up and a width of them sixteen feet is laid in stone and then layers of fine stone and top dressing are put in place, the road rolled and it is making an excellent road. Two miles and a half have been finished from New Oxford, the workmen being now near the Swift Run concrete bridge, the dividing line between Mt. Pleasant and Straban townships. All the bridge work on the ten miles has been finished, every culvert being covered with concrete bridge or conduit.

ANNIVERSARY PREPARATION

HOUSE FOR HEADQUARTERS RENTED IN TOWN.

Some of the Problems that must be Faced and Solved to Make Celebration a Success.

Gettysburg may expect to see active preparations for the celebration of the Fiftieth Anniversary begin at this end of the line at an early date. Last week Captain Edward T. Hartman, the representative of the War Department was in town for two days. He met here Colonel Lewis Beiler, secretary of the Pennsylvania Anniversary Commission. The Runkle property on Baltimore street was rented from Dr. H. L. Diehl by Captain Hartman and it is expected that a force of engineers and assistants will be sent here from Washington, who will take possession of the house and will begin the active physical preparation for the anniversary.

It will be remembered that to Captain Hartman this place is indebted in large measure for the thorough study of the town and conditions which led up to the highly efficient grasp of the situation shown in the special report made by the War Department to Congress before that body took action in committing the National Government to the proposition. It was Captain Hartman who went into the practical details of camp sites, water supply, local transportation, policing, lighting, hospital and railroad facilities. He did the work here that our citizens had been urging the Pennsylvania Commission to do for months before.

It is said that a general order is pending in the War Department by which all army officers who have been on duty at Washington will be ordered out on duty at different army posts and that Captain Hartman belongs to the number likely to receive these orders. Gettysburg has special need of Captain Hartman. He has shown the efficiency in the study of the difficulties that will make the celebration a success. He is the one man who should be assigned to help do the work he has planned and understands he has been the only one given the opportunity, who has been able to show initiative in the solution of the tasks that must be done here. Every friend of Gettysburg, every one interested in seeing the celebration made a great success should join in urging the Secretary of War to assign Captain Hartman to the tasks yet to be done here.

The particular significance of Col. Beiler's visit last week was not clearly gathered, but it is most apparent that the Pennsylvania Commission is devoting too much time and concern to a defensive attitude. Of course that is to be expected as the natural result when there has been a falling down in the physical work of preparation and all that labor has been transferred to the War Department, but Gettysburg would far more appreciate a making good at the work that must be done than any official illuminating defense of what was not done in the part.

The great hope of the Pennsylvania Anniversary Commission is its new member, J. M. Schoonmaker, vice president of the Pittsburgh, Lake Erie and Western Railroad. He has won his spurs in the railroad world and is a live wire. He visited Gettysburg recently in his special car and went over the situation and from his few remarks dropped it was easy to see that he appreciated the work that had to be done here. There is no question that Mr. Schoonmaker will make good in any work to which he put his shoulder and will do all in his power to help the Commission to make a success of their end of the job.

The inclination to let others do certain work rather than the Pennsylvania Commission was apparent from certain things said by Col. Beiler. He told here of officials of all the States being written to in order to have it indicated how many veterans might attend from each State. The answer in this way to the most important inquiry as to the number of veterans likely to attend the celebration would come from 48 different methods of ascertaining the information. It should certainly be possible either through a bureau established by the Commission and working through the pension department or through the G. A. R. Posts of the country, for positive and accurate information to be obtained of the possible attendance of veterans.

Right at this point the work of preparation revolves around an arbitrary figure of 40,000 veterans. In view of the information from New York State leading up to an appropriation of $235,000 for the attendance of 25,000 veterans. In view of the provision made by New Jersey for the attendance of her veterans. In view of what is being done in Massachusetts toward bringing her veterans. These are States alone involving a possible attendance of 10,000 veterans and in view of the fact that Pennsylvania must be as generous to her veterans as any of the neighboring States, our guess of a possible attendance of 100,000 veterans with the present light on the subject is just as good as any other guess of 40,000.

Is it not possible in preparing for 40,000 veterans that such preparation will be entirely inadequate? It will not do to say that only veterans able to come alone should come, and that the general public must stay away. Every veteran desiring to come and able to come alone or with companion should be welcome. The railroads will not be able to discriminate between veterans and the general public and they must sell tickets to all applicants for the same. The most important feature of present preparations is more accurate information as to attendance and then adequate preparation by State and Nation for the same. Congress will be in session next week, and the Pennsylvania Legislature in about a month and it will be possible to ask and have these bodies authorize all needed preparation, and if the information that should be gathered warrants it, far in excess of what is proposed.

The State and Nation assuming the responsibilities of the celebration should go further than already planned and include accommodations for the general public. Those in charge know that Gettysburg is a town of but 1,000 and that it is physically impossible for it to take care of over 15,000 visitors. In the opinion of many this figure is excessive. The public will come, they have a right to come. It is believed that already one-half of the accommodations the town can give have been engaged. When the town and county round about have gone the limit in the care of people it will not do for State and Nation to offer no relief for the condition that is bound to result but to be prepared to do their part. It may take specific amendments to both the congressional statute and the State law, to accomplish this, but this should be done and we commend it earnestly to those responsible for the preparations.

Littlestown Demonstration
The Democratic jubilee demonstration held in Littlestown on Tuesday evening of last week was the largest gathering held in that place for years and there were delegations from all nearby places and the country round about. The line of march covered every street in the town. The parade was divided into three divisions, the marshal of the first division being D. L. Slagle, with W. A. Noble and J. B. Miller as aides. The Hanover Band led the column with about 75 members of the Hanover High Hat Club following. Hanover Parol Club next in line, followed by a number of automobiles.

The second division was led by the Gettysburg Band and was made up of a large number of horsemen, over 150, a number of floats and the Carroll County Band. Among the floats was the one of Allan B. Plank in the Gettysburg parade and containing Frank Slonaker's elephant with feet in air. This float was awarded the prize from Hanover came the float, "The Star Chamber," representing Gitt. Long and Sell in the famous conference.

The third division consisted of the Littlestown Band, and marching clubs with floats of Clean Sweep and an 8-mule team drawing the Salt River boat.

Charles Hildebrand, the 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Hildebrand of East Berlin, while out gunning last week, met with a serious accident which will leave him a cripple the balance of his life. He was in the act of climbing over a fence on the Andrew Bowser farm when the trigger of the loaded gun came in contact with some obstacle and discharged the weapon sending the entire contents into his left hand. The thumb is entirely off and the remaining hand is so badly shattered that amputation will probably be necessary. Dr. Elgin dressed the wounds of the injured lad after which he was hurried to the York hospital.

Messrs. Masemer and Bradley of Harrisburg were visitors last week at the home of Edward Masemer at Cregar's Mill, near New Chester, and went on a hunting expedition. While the two men were in quest of game some distance from the mill, Masemer's gun was in some manner accidentally discharged, and the full charge of shot struck Bradley who was but a short distance away. The man's body, head and limbs were literally peppered with shot, and his wounds were of very serious nature. Dr. Lehn of Hampton, gave the necessary treatment, bandaged the wounds, etc. Antitoxin being used as a precaution against tetanus. The man was immediately sent to his home at Harrisburg, and latest reports are to the effect that he is improving.

FEIST PARDONED.
Governor Tener last week pardoned Jacob G. Feist, the Harrisburg broker, who has been in Eastern Penitentiary for nearly a year, after being convicted of criminally assaulting a 14-year old girl. Judge W. Rush Gillan of Franklin county presided at the trial and wrote the Board of Pardons that he regretted he had not sentenced Feist to a term twice as long. In September the Board of Pardons had recommended the pardon to Governor Tener but it was refused. Last week it came before him again and was granted.

Fire Destroys Barns.
Early last Thursday morning the barn on farm of Lewis Kane, located in Franklin township, midway between Cashtown and Arendtsville, burnt to the ground with wagon shed, chicken house hog pen, and contents of hay, grain, harness and some machinery.

Mr. Kane and his sons were at deer camp at the time. Mrs. Kane was at home with several children. She was awakened by noise at about 4 o'clock but could see nothing wrong from her window. Later the discovery was made of barn being on fire. Mrs. Kane with help of some neighbors saved the live stock.

The barn, stable and chicken house of Charles Johnson of McKnightstown, burnt down on Sunday of last week. The fire was discovered by H. E. Riddlemeyer and C. T. Lower, and they succeeded in getting horse out of the stable and saving a buggy. The contents of hay, straw, $50 worth of wire fencing and other articles were destroyed. A number of other stables were saved from destruction by prompt and effective work of neighbors who gathered at fire.

Fell From Wagon.
Ex-County Commissioner John F. Sharets of Cumberland township, was severely hurt last week. He was engaged hauling a load of corn to barn of Samuel Weikert on southern border of this place and had reached the barn to unload when he lost his balance and fell off the wagon, striking his head on a rock it is thought. He was unconscious for several hours. His injuries have been extremely painful. A speedy recovery is expected.

Nature's Way Is The Best.

Buried deep in our American forest we find bloodroot, queen's root, mandrake and stone root, golden seal, Oregon grape root and cherry bark. Of these Dr. R. V. Pierce made a pure glyceric extract which has been favorably known for over forty years. He called it "Golden Medical Discovery."

This "Discovery" purifies the blood and tones up the stomach and the entire system in Nature's own way. It's just the tissue builder and tonic you require when recovering from a hard cold, grip, or pneumonia. No matter how strong the constitution the stomach is apt to be "out of kilter" at times; in consequence the blood is disordered, for the stomach is the laboratory for the constant manufacture of blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery strengthens the stomach—puts it in shape to make pure, rich blood—helps the liver and kidneys to expel the poisons from the body. The weak, nervous, run-down, debilitated condition which so many people experience at this time of the year is usually the effect of poisons in the blood; it is often indicated by pimples or boils appearing on the skin, the face becomes thin—you feel "blue."

More than a week ago I was suffering with an awful cold in my head, throat, breast, and body," writes Mr. JAMES G. KENT, of 710 L. Street, S. E., Washington, D. C. "Some called it La Grippe, some pneumonia. I was advised by a friend to try a bottle of your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I tried a bottle and it did me so much good that I feel safe in saying it is the greatest and best medicine that I ever took. My health is much better than it was before using your medicine. It does all you claim for it and is satisfactory."

SALE OF RED CROSS SEALS

HOLIDAY CAMPAIGN OF SEALS HAS BEGUN

The Proceeds to go to Save Humanity From Some of the Ills Fleshy is Heir to.

The Red Cross Seal campaign has begun. The Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis has completed its preliminary arrangements for the state wide sale of the Christmas stamps. The Seals will be sold in practically every county in Pennsylvania and in every town of importance in the State. Altogether between 3,000,000 and 3,500,000 will be distributed. The design this year is considered to be more artistic than that of last year. A small red cross stands out each corner of the stamp. Across the top appears the words, "Merry Christmas," and at the bottom "Happy New Year." In the center of the stamp is a picture of Santa Claus with "American Red Cross" above and "1912" below. Sprigs of holly complete the decorative work on the stamp.

The stamps as usual will sell for One Cent each. The proceeds will go for the prevention of tuberculosis. In such cities where the sale of stamps is large, local committees have been formed. These committees will supervise both the selling of the seals and the spending of the funds raised in their localities. Elsewhere the Pennsylvania Society will take charge of this work. Persons desiring to form local committees should write to the Pennsylvania Society at its headquarters, 1701 Chestnut Street, Phila.

Samuel M. Spry, who last year covered a large portion of the State in the interest of the Red Cross Seal sale will represent the Society this year in this branch of its work. He has left Philadelphia for Sunbury where he will begin his work. He will interview all the leading merchants in the various towns through which he passes, and will urge upon them the need of their support in the campaign against tuberculosis and the good which they can accomplish through placing Red Cross Seals on sale. Mr. Spry will also carry with him literature giving the principles underlying the prevention of tuberculosis. It is expected that this year's sale will be more successful than any which have been held before.

The sale will close as usual on Christmas Day, or where there is a special enthusiasm on the part of the local workers, it will be continued until January 1st. The time set aside by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis for the opening of the sale is November 29th. This will be observed by most of the Branch Societies of the Pennsylvania Society. Such places where Mr. Spry shall visit, however, will be permitted to begin their work as soon as they receive the Red Cross Seals.

That Big Bull Moose.

(By "Damon Harvey, Clearfield, Pa., author of "Send Him Back," etc., etc.)

A big Bull Moose—King of his herd—From down near Oyster Bay—With hay upon his horns broke in Our pasture field one day: We'd never seen a Moose before So ponderous and so proud He bawled for other Mooses, He-bellowed long and loud.

In Texas he was plainly heard. In California, too. The echoes reached Seattle—And up to Kalamazoo: They heard him in the "Pine Tree State."

Down the Atlantic coast, Throughout the central sections—But in Western States the most.

We strove to drive him off—but lo Those prongs our wraths defied. He curbed his neck and pawed the turf. Would not be satisfied: He left his mother group of Moose. Deserted them in June. To gather up a winning herd. Ere flowers ceased to bloom.

He mustered up four million strong. A unity herd were they. And lined them up for battle—On the fifth November day: He's made big lions bite the dust Whipped "fannary" tiger too. But a little Jersey "Skeeter" Made him meet his "Waterloo."

He longed for more monopoly maize More fattening tariff tares. More trusts to fill the Moose's maw. More Presidential Pears: He'd had a taste of them before. They made him great and strong. Been lauded up in history. And poised up in song.

He's gone to graze on pastures green Back near the Oyster Bay. His Mooseship, weakened by his bluff. Defeated in the fray: In fields of fame there'll be no Moose Distinguished by renown. There'll be no hay upon their horns. No horns upon their crown. Copies of the above Poem, nicely printed, may be had by sending two-cent stamps to the Invalid Author: Damon Harvey, Clearfield, Pa.

Youth's Companion Calendar.

The publishers of the "Youth's Companion" will, as always at this season, present to every subscriber whose subscription ($2.00) is paid for 1913, a beautiful souvenir. This year it takes the unique form of a Window Transparency, to be hung in the window or in front of a lighted lamp. Through it the light shines as through the stained glass of a cathedral window, softly illuminating the design—a figure of Autumn laden with fruits and all around, wreathed in purple clusters of grapes and green foliage, is the circle of the months. It is the most attractive gift ever sent to Companion readers.

THE TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

Singing, "Old Black Joe, Come to the Meadows."

Dr. Corson spoke upon the "Home and the School." He appreciated the fact that the large audience gathered for the afternoon's entertainment contained many parents. There are three factors for good in the world. The Church, the home and the school. He asked the parents for sympathy and help for the school. There should be friendliness. It is a mistake to hold up the school as a scarecrow to the children. There is much less friction in the management of the school than in the home. Home discipline is a serious matter. "What would become of young America were it not for the public schools?" Every serious trouble in discipline in school can be traced back to the home where there is no obedience. Together parent and teacher should try to save the boy or girl, far after all the only problem of Church and home and school is the saving of humanity.

Prof. Roth then announced a meeting of Teachers' League after regular adjournment.

Thursday Morning.

"The Morning Greeting" opened the session of Institute, followed by "Lead Kindly Light." Rev. J. Chas. Gardner of the U. B. Church led in devotional exercises, with lesson from the Scriptures and prayer.

Prof. Roth made announcements concerning school journals and central and final examinations. Boys and girls of advanced grades must study civil government. Algebra is optional with pupils, but teachers are requested to teach it. All candidates for admission to high schools should have a common school diploma. With very few exceptions pupils who do the best work in high school are those who remain until graduation in rural schools.

The first address was given by Dr. Corson, "The Teacher in and out of School." A great deal is expected of the teacher in both places.

Some simple questions that should characterize the teacher in the school:

1. Good nature in school room showing the right attitude towards life.
 2. Good housekeeping as surroundings teach.
 3. The power to organize well, taking lessons from the business world.
- Outside the school:
1. A good citizen, standing for the best things.
 2. A good listener, giving courteous, sympathetic attention, but never taking part in neighborhood quarrels.
 3. A good mixer, mixing with people in a friendly way, in sincerity, not pretence.

At the close of this most excellent advice Prof. Roy Knouse of Arendtsville made an announcement concerning the Teachers' League, then briefly told of the great advantages to be found at State College during the summer school session. The admirable location and excellent courses of instruction make it an ideal place for teachers who wish higher education. The work of the summer may be continued through the year by correspondence. Any teacher desiring further information should address Dr. S. E. Weber, State College.

Prof. Roth announced that State Teachers' Association will be held at Harrisburg December 26, 27, 28. He urged teachers to spend at least one day there. The majority of the schools will be closed during Christmas week, thus giving the teachers the opportunity to attend. The enrollment fee is $1.00 and this also secures the proceedings, valuable because published in full, and giving to members, even not in attendance, the best thoughts of the best educational leaders in the State. Membership cards can be secured from Prof. Roy D. Knouse, Arendtsville, and Miss Helen Cope of Gettysburg.

Singing, "Blossom Bellis," "The Lord of the Harvest," "Old Black Joe."

A meeting of the Rural Teachers' Association was announced.

Dr. Fess in another of his remarkable character studies presented "Horace Mann," the pioneer of much that is best in our educational plane today. He depicted him first as a statesman worthy to follow in the place of John Quincy Adams, then as the great educator who, nominated to the governorship of the State and at the same time to the presidency of a college, accepted the latter because of conditions that would enable him to carry out educational reforms and innovations in which he sincerely believed, though at the same time he cast aside a great opportunity for political preferment. His life was a great testimony of his own famous sentence, "Be ashamed to die until you have won some great victory for humanity."

Singing, "Juanita."

The next period was of interest to all citizens of Adams county as it was occupied by a representative of the "Chestnut Blight Commission" of Pennsylvania.

G. C. Walburn of Philadelphia, representing the Chestnut Tree Blight Commission had an exhibit of chestnut blight showing the characteristics of this bark disease at the Adams County Teachers' Institute in session at Gettysburg, Nov. 21. In an address to the institute Mr. Walburn explained how this was a part of the educational campaign now being carried on by the Commission. He spoke in part as follows:

The Commission is very anxious to have a permanent chestnut blight exhibit in every school in the State and while it is of course impossible for us to get them all up we shall gladly send the material to make them in regular riker specimen cases or plain wooden boxes with a glass cover like those used here. A complete set of all the literature and printed matter issued by the Commission on the blight will be placed in each County Superintendent's library and also in the high school library.

It is recommended that each teacher devote 2-4 of an hour to the discussion of chestnut blight in the botany class and if possible add some field work too, they can have a little of the practical as well as the technical knowledge.

BABY'S CARE IS MOTHER'S WORRY

SCOTT'S EMULSION improves the quality of breast milk—it supplies the material for bone and muscle—if scanty or thin, it makes it rich and abundant.

For bottle babies a few drops of emulsion with every feeding produces marvelous effects—makes new, firm flesh and ruddy health.

SCOTT'S EMULSION is the cream of the purest cod liver oil delicately emulsified into tiny particles resembling maternal milk and each particle is coated with glycerine—no alcohol or stimulant—a wholesome, nourishing, strength-making food.

Mothers everywhere are enthusiastic about SCOTT'S Emulsion. Insist on getting SCOTT'S.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Bloomfield, N. J. 12-64

Education and co-operation bring the quickest and best results and we desire the active help of every teacher in the work. Let the public understand that your school is a field office for the community in the fight against the blight, where they may become familiar with the disease, its characteristics and obtain the latest information on what is being done or what to do. By getting this introduced in all the schools we can very soon completely cover the State.

Many people have a wrong impression of the nature of the work the Commission is doing. In the first place it was authorized by the Act of Assembly, approved by the Governor and appointed for the investigation, prevention, control and eradication of the chestnut tree blight.

In addition to several laboratories of our own at work now endeavoring to find a cure we have the hearty co-operation of the authorities at Washington.

There is no charge to have timber inspected nor for the services of the Commission which are free. When blighted trees are discovered they should be cut down promptly as directed to prevent the disease from spreading to healthy trees. The Commission does not want to cause any loss so it assists in every possible way in finding a market for such diseased timber at a profit to the owner. Much valuable material on the utilization of chestnut has been compiled by the Commission for the benefit of the timber owner.

Persons interested should write to the Commission for information and recommendations. If field agents of this Commission have not already visited owners of chestnut in your community, they will soon do so. When he does call kindly go over your property with him, giving all possible assistance.

Don't overlook the fact that even where a district is free from blight or after it has been eradicated that a new infection is liable to be carried into the section again from some distance outside that area. It is very important that owners keep a careful watch on their timber for such infection so as to wipe it out promptly before it has time to spread, for by doing this it is possible to practically keep timber tracts free of blight. But eternal vigilance is truly the price of peace in this war. Let every one do all they can to assist in the work.

Wherever there are farmers' meetings, Chamber of Commerce, or school meetings, or in fact any public meetings of any nature we would appreciate your notifying us of same and we shall gladly furnish a speaker to give a talk on the disease. Needless to say please give as much advance notice as you can. Our address is 1112 Morris Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

You will find this subject to be a serious one with most of those you meet because the damage done in this State alone is $10,000,000 to date—probably more.

IT IS YOUR KIDNEYS.

Don't Mistake the Cause of Your Troubles, a Gettysburg Citizen Gives a Valuable Hint.

Many people never suspect their kidneys. If suffering from a lame weak or aching back they think that it is only a muscular weakness; when urinary trouble sets in they think it will soon correct itself. And so it is with all the other symptoms of kidney disorders. That is where danger often lies. You should realize that these troubles often lead to dropsy or Bright's disease. An effective remedy for weak or diseased kidneys is Doan's Kidney Pills. Read the experience of a resident of Gettysburg who has tested Doan's.

Charles Wilson, farmer, R. F. D. No. 3, Gettysburg, Pa., says: "I have used several boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and have found them satisfactory for kidney complaint. I had sharp twinges across the small of my back and in my sides. By using Doan's Kidney Pills in time I was rid of these troubles. I strongly recommend this preparation."

THE TEACHERS' INSTITUTE

THE 58TH ANNUAL INSTITUTE
HELD LAST WEEK

Notes of Addresses of Instructors—
Valuable Helps to the Teachers of County.

Tuesday Morning.

The morning session of Institute opened with the singing of "Morning Greeting." The devotional exercises began with the singing of "Morning Praise." Rev. L. Dow Ott of the Methodist Church read scripture lesson as found in Prov. 8, following this with prayer. Institute sang "When the Strife is Ended" and "Our Message."

The first speaker on the program was Prof. Dennis, expert assistant of agricultural education for the State of Pennsylvania. Subject, "The Trend of Modern Education" was specially applied to the rural school, in particular to the township high school. He questioned that there was a "back to the land movement." But that instead there really was a tendency "to stay on the land." Hitherto we have discussed, as a nation, only urban problems, now we find there are rural problems to be solved. It is a mistake to think that the population of the cities are decreasing because of the return of their inhabitants to the farms. Statistics prove this a fallacy. In 1890 but 55 per cent. of the population was rural. In 1900 47 per cent., in 1910 38 per cent., and it is further stated that in 1912 the population in rural districts will be but 36 per cent., or 40 percent. This shows that a smaller population is producing food for the entire population. Something must be done for the rural section that the condition can be more interesting and lucrative. The people of these sections must find the solution as it is their problem. We can, however, help them. We teachers have a part. The three chief agencies that can bring about reform are, 1st the Church; 2nd, the lodge; 3rd, the school. The church may do much, but is not the main one, because the people are not united. The lodge is not always successful because some people do not believe in secrecy. Then it is for the school to be the main channel through which all powers act. School is non-political, non-sectarian, non-fraternal. It is the expression of the whole people. The following are the functions of the rural schools, particularly of the township high school:

1. Training for boys and girls, culture in music, art and literature. This training should never be for farming alone, we owe that of culture and refinement.

2. Intellectual center for whole community. (a) Furnish a library of value to the community. (b) Magazines and agricultural papers. (c) Community meetings. (d) A week's lecture course. (e) Continuous school course for those that have left school.

Economic changes in country life will bring about changes in social conditions. The spelling bee, the husking bee and the singing school have passed away. What is there to take their places? The State is ready to help. Information along all agricultural lines may be obtained by writing to the State Department, or to State College. The data collected will soon be distributed throughout the State.

At the conclusion of this most practical and appropriate address the Institute joined in singing "The Lord of the Harvest."

Prof. Roth then announced that the fourth annual reunion of the former Shippensburg Normal School students would be held at Raymond's Cafe on Tuesday evening.

Dr. Corson occupied the next period upon the subject, "The Advantages of Country Teachers." He argued that anyone who is dissatisfied with his conditions never makes a success of life. The philosophy of life is to turn an emergency into an opportunity, a disadvantage into an advantage. The country teacher serves the most appreciative people in the world. Many of our greatest professional men have come from the country, because there is a greater appreciation of things that are worthy. The surroundings are better for the boy, they are educative. Boys upon the farm learn to take the initiative and to do things right. The busy life of the farm helps to make the country boy superior to the city lad in many ways. Dr. Corson urged the country teachers to live in the community, that they may be a part of the life they are trying to help. There are greater opportunities for teaching in the country, for observation and experiment. This very strong plea for a greater appreciation of the teacher for his work could not fail in its purpose as a hopeful message. Singing followed this discourse.

Dr. Fess discussed "The Present Worth of History" declaring that there must be some reason for teaching any event. The importance of any historic incident depends upon its cause and effect. The Declaration of Independence proclaimed all men free and equal, and it was but an expression of the sentiment of the times, which had gradually developed out of the tyranny of mediocrity. The importance of teaching such a document is to be found in the force of its cause, still greater in its effect. Morning session then adjourned.

Tuesday Afternoon.

The first period was devoted to the memory of the delivering of Lincoln's Gettysburg speech, Nov. 19, being the forty-ninth anniversary of that great event. Prof. McDowell led in the singing of several songs. Prof. J. Louis Sowers gave a brief but interesting account of the incidents of Nov. 19, 1863, and the audience recited under his leadership the great Lincoln speech. The singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" concluded this impressive memorial tribute.

Dr. Corson, the first speaker of the afternoon, gave some very pointed advice upon "Teaching Pupils to Help Themselves." He spoke of the difficulty of knowing how much help may be given without weakening the capability of the one who asks for assistance. Too much help weakens, too little may produce permanent discouragement. "The mission of the school is to give the power to the pupil to master a problem alone." Many people expose themselves to an education and do not catch it. Teach the children to use their own power and to do their own work. The ideal teacher has an aptitude for vicariousness, must be able to reproduce the perplexities that exist in the mind of the child. "As a rose may shut up and become a bud again." Such will be patient teachers. As a definition of teaching remarkable for its simplicity, yet true in its very nature, Dr. Corson gave the following: "Teaching is explaining anything over and over again, without getting out of patience. Through this failure in patience, the pupil slow of thought and speech is often shut out. We must give the slow pupil the chance to find out that he can do something."

Singing "The Book Song" followed. Prof. Dennis, the second speaker, in giving "The Present Status of Public School Agriculture," named three types of agricultural schools existing in this or other States.

1. District Agricultural schools, one to each congressional district.
2. The county school—same curriculum as four years' high school, agriculture and industrial training instead of Latin.
3. Township high school. A regular township high school with agricultural department.

The work done in the above schools is accomplished by means of textbooks, direct observation and experiments. Clubs are formed, girls' sewing clubs, boys' corn and potato clubs. The teaching of agriculture means only the readjustment of school conditions to meet the conditions of agriculture. Prof. Dennis described the work of the corn clubs in selection, germination and corn growing contests. Giving the good results of such contests, he proved the real practical value of this new feature of education. The singing of "Our Message" followed this address.

Dr. Fess gave the last instruction as a character sketch, choosing for study the late Henry Ward Beecher. His picture of the great preacher in the many dramatic situations of his life showed him a veritable master of men. The afternoon session then adjourned.

Wednesday Morning.

The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. J. B. Baker of the St. James' Lutheran Church, who read and led in prayer. Music, "Our Message," "Morning Praise," "Onward Christian Soldiers" and "Crossing the Bar."

Prof. Sanders of Pennsylvania College, addressed the Institute on the "Social Aim in Education."

The trend of education in our age is towards the practical. Much of the inspiration in this direction has come from Herbert Spencer's essay on Education, and there is real danger that Spencer's one-sidedness is becoming all too dominant. It must be remembered that his essay was a protest against the English system of the middle of last century. He was combating a system that was wholly impractical and formal, and he went to the opposite extreme of emphasizing the formal at the expense of the cultural and formal.

The thought I wish to present this morning involves a more comprehensive practical education than Spencer's. Prof. Pearson says that the sole reason that can be given for any social institution is its contribution to the welfare of human society, to social happiness and to social stability. I shall make this my text. As the child is introduced to the world he is equipped with an instinctive organization which enables him to adapt to his environment. His earliest adaptations are directed towards the satisfaction of his simpler needs. As time wears on and weeks lengthen into months and his early years give rise to new demands of a broader and more complex character. But his point of contact still remains on the plane of the physical. He demands things. He insists that their sole purpose is his need, they exist for his use. Much of our education remains on this plane. We are hearing much these days about manual training, domestic science, agriculture, &c., in our schools. I haven't a word to say against these. I do insist however, that we must not lose sight of the higher aims of education. These very essential departments arise from our contact with our physical environment. They supply physical needs. An education that culminates in making an efficient member of a social body whose whole function seems to be industry and commerce fails of the highest at which education must aim. We are not engaged in constructing machines for grinding out dollars. We are educating persons to take their places as members of a social organization whose highest functions are personal.

Above the physical point of contact with the environment, comes the esthetic or cultural. Our school system must not forget these. Social happiness requires these quite as much as the economic products of industry. When the child learns the distinction between thing, playthings and playmates it begins to move into the sphere of rights and privileges. Playthings are to be used, playmates are to co-operate for mutual advancement. In this co-operation organization becomes necessary. In other words the movements of the social group must be disciplined to harmonious action just as in the case of the individual the various members of the body had to be trained to perform their various functions. In the individual this is accomplished in the formation of habitual modes of action under the guidance of ideas of pleasure and pain. There it was the human individual, here it is the humane society that is to be developed. The stability to which we have referred rests upon effective organization of the social whole in harmony with humane principles. This requires judgment, authority, obedience. And these must be attained through the cultural and formal disciplines, the disciplines which Spencer would so largely neglect. The instinctive attitudes must be rationalized. Suppose a football game is played on the athletic field. How long will it be until the town knows the result? But suppose again there is an inner collegiate debate on this platform. When will the town be informed as to the details? The cultural and formal disciplines cultivate selective judgment, and the appreciation of the social elements of permanent value. This can never be performed by the vocational or industrial disciplines. The highest factor in the Social Aim must be stability coupled with growth, for society is alive and all living things grow. This growth and stability rests on comprehensive principles of concerted action which are held in respect because of their intrinsic worth. The child must learn to obey by making the law its own. This requires inspiration rather than compulsion. The electric chair in the State and the rod in the school room represent our acknowledgment that we have not yet advanced sufficiently in our understanding of social pedagogics to develop character positively. I am not saying these must be dispensed with forthwith, I am not discussing that question. But stability and healthful progress of the social organism can only be realized in its highest sense by the positive work we do in inspiring the members of society to make the governing principles of society their own. It is easier to crush individuality and coerce obedience. But it is grander to study your case and inspire him to make the positive choice of obedience.

In summary therefore we mean to say that the Social Aim of Education involves the positive development of individuals into efficient members of society. Efficiency implies industrial efficiency, as provided in vocational studies; cultural efficiency as provided in the esthetic disciplines; and political efficiency as provided in the formal disciplines which enable the pupil to appropriate the ideal principles of ethics and the progressive principles of stable government.

His address was followed by singing "Blossom Bells" and "Pop Corn Man." Prof. Roth made an announcement concerning the books in the reading course.

Dr. S. D. Fess prefaced his morning discourse by a few complimentary remarks upon the excellent attitude of the audience expressed in their good attention and ready response. Dr. Fess then proceeded to speak on the new things in "Civics." Having been a member of the recent Constitutional Convention in Ohio, he used his experience in that convention as the basis of his explanation. He explained the principles of "initiative and referendum." He believes the representative government is the greatest fact that government knows. That direct legislation from the direct will of the people, as involved in the new ideas, is too ideal. An immense population can not legislate except through a smaller body. People should legislate indirectly through a legislature. Indirect initiative was ratified by Ohio. Whenever the legislature is elected upon any issue and fails to pass that issue, 3 per cent. of the people can get out a petition. This petition goes to the legislature, if it refuses then to pass it, with an additional 3 per cent. of the people, it may come before the State for a direct vote and will then become a law. The above expedient corrects misrepresentation. He showed the value of the principle of "referendum" that gives the chance to the people to petition against a bill passed by legislature before it becomes a law. As it can not become a law within ninety days of its passage. Under the head of "recall," he described the provision in the new constitution that created a commission appointed by the governor to be ratified by the legislature. This commission hears complaints concerning State officials and has the power of dismissal. He discussed the merits of the short ballot. Its principle is based upon:

1. A function in government that is policy determining.
2. An administration with efficient administrators.

All of the officers in the government that are policy determining should be elected by the people—senators, representatives, governor, lieutenant governor, auditor. Others should be appointed. You can not always get efficiency when party lines are considered. In the case of appointment people could ask for certain selections. He congratulated the people of Pennsylvania that the office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction had been filled by one person appointed from term to term irrespective of politics that the excellent standard of educational ideals in this State is a result of the plan of appointing administrators. He advocated the government of cities through commissions. Dr. Fess believes that certain reforms such as child labor, anti-cigarette laws, etc., will never come to pass unless the suffrage be extended to women. That women themselves, unwilling to assert this as their right, should demand suffrage, as a matter of duty.

This very plain and sincere explanation of principles was appropriately followed by the singing of "One Flag We Follow."

Dr. Corson continued his subject, "Helping Pupils to Help Themselves." The teacher's knowledge must be broad enough to question a pupil from every standpoint. There is danger sometimes that the specialist can not do this when outside the line of his specialization. Teachers should be growing in knowledge. No teacher can be an inspiration unless he be a student. In the giving of help one should not be sentimental, pupils have no right to expect help unless they have first helped themselves. The motto of a school should be, "Watch Us Grow." The session adjourned.

Wednesday Afternoon.

The first period was devoted to music. Prof. McDowell has the happy faculty of imparting his enthusiasm to his audience. During the period they sang "Pennsylvania State Song," "Our Message," "Old Folks at Home," "Dixie."

Dr. Fess continued his character study of the wonderful qualities in the personality of Henry Ward Beecher that made him the victor when people were antagonistic to the principles for which he was struggling. No man was superior to him in the handling of such a crisis. He always mastered his antagonistic listeners. He was strong in dramatic action, but the greatest reason for his Several Young Women Answer the Summons That is Often Hard To Understand.

Mrs. SALLIE SEXTON ARMSTRONG was stricken with paralysis while walking on streets of Carlisle last Thursday afternoon. She left her home to go to the First Lutheran Chapel, carrying some supplies for an oyster supper to be held that evening. Two girls noticing that she walked unsteadily went to help, taking her packages. Near the public fountain she became weaker and others went to her assistance and helped her to reach a resting place. A cab was secured and after she was helped into it she became unconscious. Mrs. John Ziegler of this place, her only child, received the word of her mother's illness after the 4 o'clock train had left this place, but by automobile she was able to reach her mother fifteen minutes before she died. Mrs. Armstrong was a native of Carlisle, daughter of Henry Saxton, a prominent merchant of that place. After her marriage she went to Ohio but only lived there several years, returning to Carlisle. Why Salves Can't Cure Eczema

Since the old-fashioned theory of curing eczema through the blood has been given up by scientists, many different salves have been tried for skin diseases. But it has been found that these salves only clog the pores and cannot penetrate to the inner skin below the epidermis where the eczema germs are lodged. Thus the quality of penetrating probably explains the tremendous success of the well known liquid eczema remedy, oil of wintergreen, thymol, glycerine, etc., as compounded in D.D.D. Prescription.

FLINN DROPS BULL MOOSE.

The High Priest of the Armageddon Movement in Pennsylvania—William, otherwise Bill Flinn, has deserted the Oyster Bay noise about "the party must live" and returns to the Republican party. Flinn needs all the Republicanism he can decorate himself in to attempt to run the Legislature show when it opens Jan. 1, and cope with the Penrose-McNichol-Vare machine. It is not likely that they will willingly take rear seats in the car and let Bill, covered with the taint of the Bull Moose irregularity, at the steering gear.

It's going to be fun to watch D. B. A. and Bill B. and some others dismount, and swap horses. Of course it may make no difference to the first in his quest for the dollars in politics, but poor Bill B. Last week the "Star" divined his destiny saying: Bill—B. McIlhenny has developed into a first-class lightning change artist. First a Republican then a Bull Moose, and finally taking part in a Democratic parade. It seems to be about time for Geo. Raif, to take him out behind the woodshed and tell him where he is.

DEMOCRACY FIRST ON BALLOT.

Under a Pennsylvania State law the party casting the highest number of votes at a presidential election will entitle such party to first place on the ballot. The Republican has had first place on the ballot ever since the present law has been on the statute books. The Democratic party will take first place on the ballot until it is displaced by a party that shall cast a higher vote than it at a presidential election. While Roosevelt carried the State it was by a combination of Washington party, Bull Moose and Roosevelt Progressive votes. The official figures giving Democracy first place are as follows: Wilson 335,619, Roosevelt Washington, 347,949, Bull Moose 60,464, Roosevelt Progressive 35,513, total 444,426, Taft 373,205, Debs 80,215, Cnffin 19,533, Reimer 706.

THE TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

Thursday Afternoon.

"Pennsylvania Song," "Our Message," "America," "Swanee River," "Come to the Meadows."

Prof Corson spoke of the large audience that filled Bruea Chapel as a typical Pennsylvania audience on Thursday afternoon at institute. "Your presence," he said, "is attribute to the school. The singing is glorious." The speaker then delivered his appeal on the subject, "Home and School." He asked parents that they discipline in the home in away that makes for obedience, without which there is no character. No one ever lead who had not first obeyed. Also discipline in a way that makes for industry. Teach the children not to flinch when a hard place comes. Parents must realize that there is no better place in the world for children than "home" in the evenings at study. The problem in the high school is not that they are over-worked but that they are over-worked outside in society. Good home influence should steady the children while in school. The only great necessity is the home that will keep them at work at the task assigned them at school. Parents must not misjudge, they must give support to multiply the support of the teacher. Three very good rules for patrons are:

1. Teach industry.
2. Sustain teachers till facts are looked into.
3. Never criticize teacher in presence of the child.

Prof. McDowell, upon request, sang a solo, "Sweet Miss May," and a "Yeaman's Song," a very enjoyable feature of the afternoon. The audience then sang "Old Black Joe."

Prof. Roth announced that owing to the disbanding of the Welsh Singers, he had substituted the Philadelphia Quartet for the evening's entertainment.

Dr. Fess then described a national convention, taking as an example the convention of 1896. He said there is no great convention if there is no conflict. Great leaders come forward that is are born of a great convention. The tide of enthusiasm rises to so great a height that men act unconsciously of the fact that they are wild with excitement of the time, yet it is the calm of the firestorm at home that great questions of men and government must be brought out.

Friday Morning

Prof. Sanders of Pennsylvania College opened the last session of Institute with Scripture lesson, Romans 12, and prayer, following "Our Message" was sung.

Prof. Roth then took up the business of the convention. He stated that all the teachers of the county were present with one exception, who was absent because of sickness. Those absent must furnish certificates from doctor otherwise a deduction is made from their salary. Prof. Roth requested all district secretaries to forward all district programs or reports of meetings held, also time and place of those to be held. The records of committee were read and accepted.

Prof. Sanders made an announcement regarding the change to be made in Gettysburg during the summer of 1913. He said that such an assembly is in institute. No one can be under the influence of the ideal without being the better of it. Its members are brought into contact with the best educators upon the platform. As lecturers such men as Wm. Jennings Bryan, Gov. Hadley and others of like notoriety will be heard. The summer school conducted at Pennsylvania College is another feature of the summer's educational opportunities that should be seriously considered by all teachers. It is an institute of six weeks where genuine work is done. Its aim is to meet the demands of the teacher, to get into contact with real school problems. There will be great provision for art, music, and pedagogical subjects next year.

Dr. Fess, the next speaker, paid a glowing tribute to Gettysburg as a desirable place to be. "It is richer in reminiscences than any other place in the world," he said. He spoke of the need of the teacher not as the getting of fact, but of stimulation. The qualities that make for leadership are:

1. Ability to see what ought to be done.
2. Emotional life that will induce you to want to help to do these things.
3. Uncompromising determination that the thing you see ought to be done and what you want to help to do, will cause you to determine to do.

A lawyer once said, "The little town of Concord, Mass., is of greater importance than the cities of New York and Chicago combined. For though it has no material greatness it produced an Emerson, Hawthorne, Thoreau—men whose talent of head and heart were consecrated to the world's goodness." Why should teachers apologize for their work? There may be no material measure of it, but we must remember greatness is never measured by the bushel or the yardstick. Your measure is not what you get out of life, but what you put into it. Our sources of greatness are not in our farms, our forests, our mines, but in our men and women; and the base of it in the children we are teaching. Dr. Fess then bade the institute farewell, having added to his valuable instruction the geniality of a man who has the sincere purpose of making people happy in their work.

Prof. McDowell then led in the singing of "Old Black Joe."

Dr. Corson, in his subject, "After the Institute is Over," told the teachers "to measure not from the height of the waves in a storm, but from the calm of the ocean." The success of the Institute as far as each is concerned is to be measured by what is done after the enthusiasm is gone. He warned the teachers not to take instruction too literally. "Digest and make over the suggestions until they become part of yourself. Make use by magnifying your own personality. Every teacher will fail who tries to be a mere copyist. In the solving of problems where troublesome pupils are concerned, get back into the motives. You need not specifics, but common sense." Dr. Corson said that the Institute was one of the best he had ever attended, because of the good attention, the ready response, the courtesy and kindness of the town and college people also who were in attendance. Teachers have been unanimous in their appreciation of the helpful and direct talks of Dr. Corson, whose underlying secret of success as a lecturer is the sympathetic attitude toward the teacher, who may become discouraged.

Prof. McDowell led in the singing of two songs, closing a very successful week of music.

The reports of committees followed and the week's work closed with the singing of "God be with You Till We Meet Again."

The Institute of 1912 will be placed upon record as one signally noted for its excellent order, perfect attention and general good cheer. All these conditions due to the skillful management of County Superintendent Roth, the eminent character of his instructors, and the attitude of teachers and patrons.

The Unknown

A Mystery of a Lock of Hair

By ALEXANDER HUTCHINS

The summer was coming on, and I longed for some place away from the city where I could go after business hours to pass the night and return in the morning. On Saturdays we closed at noon, which gave me forty-five hours or thereabout before I would have to get back to business. After consulting with friends I chose Afton, a seacoast town, where there were a few summer cottages belonging to city people, some hotels and boarding houses. I engaged a room on the top story of a hotel where from my window I could look out upon the ocean.

It was certainly delicious, having left the city on a hot afternoon, to enter my room, see far and near the great stretch of undulating water and smell the odor of the sea. The first thing I did was to put on my bathing suit, go down to the water and take a plunge.

I went to Afton on the 1st of July when there were few persons there, but by the middle of the month the place was well filled with strangers, among whom young girls and young men not yet engaged in their life pursuits predominated. I presume there were at least fifty maidens of a marriageable age, some of them comely some intellectual and some both comely and intellectual. The bathing hour followed the tide, and some days I got away from the city sufficiently early to bathe with the crowd. These days were delightful, especially as I jumped, as it were, from the hot cobblestones of the city into the cool waves of the sea.

One evening about the 1st of August, when the season was well on, reaching my hotel after my ride from the city, the clerk handed me several letters, which I took up to my room without inspecting, for I was in a hurry for my bath. On my return from the beach while smoking a cigarette in my bath robe before the window I took up my mail. One envelope was addressed to me in a feminine hand that I did not recognize. Tearing it open, I uncovered a bit of cardboard, on which was pinned a lock of hair.

It required some time for me to get at the probable bottom of this missive, but at last I fathomed it in this wise. Some girl had seen me and, having been attracted by my appearance, had discovered my name and my hotel and had sent me this lock of her hair. Just what her object was could also only be guessed. Possibly she didn't know herself.

I fancied the girl was most likely staying in Afton. It was probable that I had no acquaintance with her. If I had her act would show a lack of maidenly modesty, for by placing the lock sent me beside her hair I could easily discover her identity. Nevertheless there was a possibility of my tracking her by this lock. She was a blond, but the shade was not uncommon. There might be a dozen girls at the place whose hair it would match reasonably well.

Knowing that I would be observed by one and possibly a number of girls, I determined not to betray my interest in the matter by a critical examination of the hair of different young ladies. So when I appeared with the through on the beach or in the water or on the board walk, though I kept my eyes open, I did not let it appear that I was looking for the lady who had sent me the lock.

I have always been one of those fellows who make acquaintances slowly and have never relied upon pushing myself forward. One day one of the young men staying at my hotel approached me, opened conversation and in due time asked me if I would not like to know some of the young ladies. I gladly assented, and the next day on the beach he introduced me to a girl who made me feel at home in her company at once. This to a retiring man is a great deal. I regretted that she could not be the one who had sent me the lock, for her hair was a beautiful shade of red.

Miss Rebecca Yardley—that was her name—was an expert swimmer, and we used to bathe together constantly. A raft was anchored out in deep water, to which we would go for diving purposes. Often she would discard the skirt, which I have always considered not only useless to women swimmers, but a drawback. Her figure was perfect, and in this skittish costume she was a model for a statue, while in the sunlight her hair took on a deep shade of gold. My amphibious companionship with her rendered me stay at Afton very different from what it had been before I met her.

I noticed that, although the young man who had introduced me to her, had asked me if I would like to know some of the girls, he did not further pursue his introductions. Whether this was because he saw that I appeared quite content with her acquaintance or for some other reason I don't know. I soon became sufficiently intimate with Miss Yardley to confide to her under her promise of secrecy that I had received an anonymous lock of hair, whereupon she said that we men did not know the number of girls who would lay traps for us and it behooved us to be on our guard. I asked her if she thought some young woman was desirous simply of providing herself with a husband, to which she replied that it was more probable the sender of the lock had seen me and my personality had especially appealed to her.

Though this supposition flattered my vanity, I was a bit disappointed, for it seemed to me that if Miss Yardley had desired to keep me for herself she would not have given me a reply that would tend to influence me favorably toward the unknown. However, her warning against designing girls and her intimating that the unknown probably had sent me the lock of her hair because she admired me neutralized each other.

One afternoon I reached Afton from the city at the time the tide was favorable for bathing, and as soon as I could get into my bathing suit I went down to join the crowd in the water. The wind was off the ocean and the surf high. As I approached the beach I saw a commotion among those standing about, most of them peering out on the water. There I saw that the interest was centered upon some one beyond the ropes. The bathing master instead of plunging in was trying to get a boat through the breakers, but without success.

I ran as fast as I could to the verge and, bounding over the crests of the first few waves, went under the next and then, with a hand over band stroke, by which I could swim the fastest, made for the person who needed assistance. I soon saw that it was a woman, and as I drew near by the redish tint on her head knew that it was Miss Yardley. On reaching her I held her up until the bathing master came with the boat, and he pulled us to shore.

She was quite exhausted, but not so much so as to forget to ask me to pick up her bathing cap, which had fallen off. She took it from me and put it on, though I could not see why, because her hair was soaked.

On account of this incident I naturally found favor with Miss Yardley, though I think had I not been there she still would have been saved. One thing I did not fancy. I feared this intimacy would cause my unknown to avoid giving me any clue to her identity. I was satisfied with Miss Yardley's companionship, but I did not like the idea of giving up my romance. And between romance and reality romance will win every time. From words I let drop to my known charm, she inferred that my mind was on her unknown rival. Instead of endeavoring to banish her from my mind Miss Yardley joined me in observing the girls whose hair fulfilled the condition that would prove her the owner of the lock. Were we perambulating the board walk or on the beach or the piazza of her hotel, she would on the approach of a blond girl ask me if her hair was not the shade of the lock I had received. Most of them were quite like it, but their number spoiled the clue.

While romance is more effective than reality flesh and blood are more effective than fancy. I was constantly with my known and never with my unknown. The consequence was that the former had a great advantage. At any rate, as the end of August drew near my constant dawdling of evenings with Miss Yardley tended to obliterate my unknown from my mind. One night—the night before Miss Yardley was to leave for home—sitting on a protruding rock, the waves rolling in beside us, strains of music and laughter coming from the hotel back of us, I forgot the girl with the lock of blond hair and asked her rival to be my wife.

We parted the next day, engaged, she to go to her home in one city, I to another. The autumn season was always a busy one to me, and there was no probability of my seeing her again till midwinter. We arranged, however, that I should join her for the holidays. Meanwhile we were to correspond.

The ink spilled during that interval was enormous. My fiancée often asked me if I had heard anything about my unknown and if I did not still cherish tender thoughts of her. I replied that the only thing that remained of the romance was the lock of hair. Upon this my love wrote me to save it for her. She had a fancy to keep it. I promised that I would bring it to her when I joined her in December.

All waits have an end, and the time came when I threw aside the cares of business and took a train to rejoin Miss Yardley. When I saw her on the evening of my arrival in her drawing room I met with the surprise of my life. I saw the same girl I had parted with a few months before, but the sensuous, all except the hair. There was no longer red, but blond.

Instead of advancing to clasp her in my arms I stood gazing at her, while she remained, head bent, blushing, but with an amused smile on her lips. As I looked a light was breaking in on my dull brain.

"You are my unknown," I exclaimed. There was no reply. In another moment I had folded her in my arms.

Her confession came later. The moment she first saw me she realized instinctively that she wished me, and alone. To start a romance she had sent me a lock of her hair; but, frightened at what she had done, she drew her own. The introduction I had received was at her own request. When we had gone her into the boat at first time she came near drowning her first thought was that the salt water might remove the dye, and she had snatched her bathing cap from me to prevent my seeing the real color of her hair. But dye is not so easily removed. For over three months her hair had been growing to its natural color, though its ends still retained some of the red. "Well," I said after listening to the confession, "the devices of women are a vast matter to us men."

Willing to Trade.

Uncle Mose was a chronic thief, who usually managed to keep within the petty larceny limit. One time he miscalculated, however, and was sent to trial on a charge of grand larceny.

"Have you a lawyer, Mose?" asked the court.

"No, sah."

"Well, to be perfectly fair I'll appoint a couple. Mr. Jones and Mr. Brown will act as counsel."

"What's dat?"

"Act as your lawyers. Consult with them and prepare to tell me whether you are guilty or not guilty."

"Yes, sah."

Mose talked to his attorneys for a few moments in husky whispers. The judge caught only the several times repeated word alibi. Then Mose arose, scratched his head and addressed the court.

"Jedge, yoh honah," he said, "couse I's only an ign'ant niggab an' Ah don't want toh bothah yoh honah, but Ah would sutlinly like toh trade, yoh honah, one ob dese yeah lawyahs foh a witness."—Kansas City Journal.

The Church of Gold.

There is no structure just like St. Mark's in Venice in the world. Its bulb shaped domes and minaret like bellfries remind the visitor of the orient. It seems more like a Mohammedan than a Christian temple. In the facade are scores of variously colored marble columns, each one a monolith and all possessing an eventful history. Some are from Ephesus, others from Smyrna, others from Constantinople and more than one even from Jerusalem. St. Mark's is the treasure house of Venice, a place of pride as well as prayer. The work of beautifying this old church was carried on for five centuries, and each generation tried to outdo all that had preceded it. The walls and roof are so profusely covered with mosaics and precious marbles that it is easy to understand why St. Mark's has been called the "Church of Gold."

The Lion and the Lamb.

The hardest thing to train a wild beast to do is to perform with a weak, defenseless animal. In one of the big circuses some years ago an effort was made to persuade a very docile old lion to lie down with a lamb. The idea was certainly a good one, but it took several lambs and also several months before the lion, which was willing to do any kind of trick, would allow a lamb to enter his den with impunity. Twice he killed a lamb in the presence of his trainer, and once he nearly killed the trainer, who tried to pull away the carcass. Finally the lion would tolerate the lamb in the den just so long as the keeper stood over it with an iron bar. But the performance was so evidently forced and so lacking in smoothness and interest that it was abandoned after two or three attempts.

Bird's Nest of Steel.

In the Museum of Natural History at Soleure, in Switzerland, there is a bird's nest made entirely of steel. There are a number of clockmaking shops at Soleure, and in the yards of these shops there are often found lying disused or broken springs of clocks. One day a clockmaker noticed in a tree in his yard a bird's nest of peculiar appearance. Examining it he found that a pair of wagtails had built a nest entirely of clock springs. It was more than four inches across and perfectly comfortable for the birds. After the feathered architects had reared their brood the nest was taken to the museum, where it is preserved as a striking illustration of the skill of birds in turning their surroundings to advantage in building their nests.

Mozart and Bretzner.

When Mozart was at the height of his fame he composed the music for Bretzner's "Belmont und Konstanze" ("The Abduction From Seraglio") at the request of the Emperor Joseph II. The author of the drama was so angry at this that he inserted the following notice in the Leipziger Zeitung: "A certain fellow of the name of Mozart has dared to misuse my drama, 'Belmont und Konstanze,' for an opera text. I hereby solemnly protest against this invasion of my rights, and I reserve to myself further procedures." (Signed) Christoph Friedrich Bretzner, author of "Rauschen."

The Mystery of Love.

If a man should importune me to give a reason why I loved him I find it could not otherwise be expressed than by making answer, because it was he; because it was I. There is beyond all that I am able to say. I know not what inexplicable and fated power that brought on this union.—Mon taigne.

Up Early.

"The boss asked me what made me look so tired," said Gailley, the clerk, "and I told him I was up early this morning."

"Huh!" snorted the bookkeeper. "You never got up early in your life."

"I didn't say that I got up. I said I was up."

A Sure Sign.

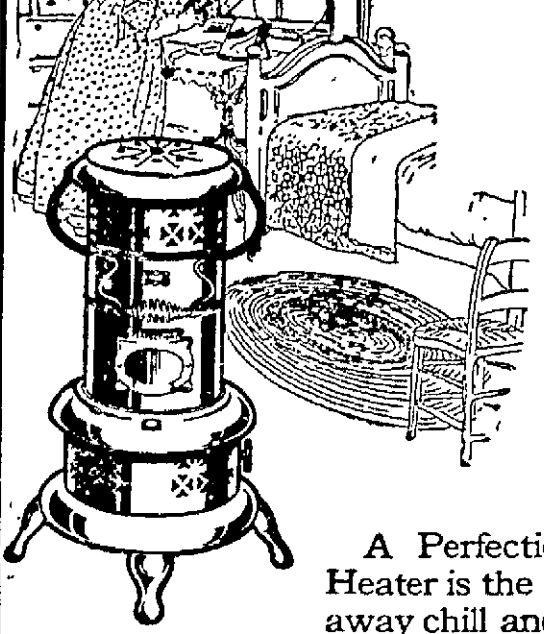

"Old Titewad is a mighty sick man, but the doctor says that if he can just keep him from giving up he has a chance of winning out."

"Then he'll win. Old Titewad never gave up anything since I have known him."—Houston Post.

In Anticipation.

Howell—Howell is always borrowing trouble. Powell—Yes; he's the kind of fellow who, if he thought he was going to get fat would go out and walk off the weight before he got it.

SAFE HUNTING RULES

OBSERVATION OF WHICH WILL LESSEN ACCIDENTS

Majority of Hunting Accidents Could be Avoided if Hunters Kept Rules in Mind.

Ever since the hunting season has opened the newspapers have contained many accounts of serious gunning accidents, which for the most part, could have been avoided by observing well known precautionary measures in the use of firearms. Prof. H. A. Surface, State Economic Zoologist, offers certain "Safe Rules" to be followed while hunting. It will be observed that almost every recorded accident is due to ignoring one or more of these rules:

1. Always keep the gun pointed from yourself and other persons.
2. Carry a gun with the end pointed either upward, toward the sky, or downward, toward the ground. Never sweep the horizon with it. If accidentally discharged while in the former position no harm is likely to result but if discharged while held horizontally it may result seriously.

3. In getting over logs or fences always see that the gun is first put over and in a solid position where it will not fall. Then go to another place to climb over, and pick up the weapon with the end pointing where it should.

4. Never pull or draw a gun toward yourself by the muzzle, especially in wagons, boats, over fences, logs, etc.

5. Do not load the gun until after leaving the house, and draw the loads (or remove caps, if a muzzle loader, and watch that no percussion is left on the tube) as soon as leaving the hunting grounds.

6. Never keep a loaded gun around the house or tent, and do not leave a loaded weapon where it may be knocked down by dogs or children.

7. Do not carry the gun cocked excepting when alert for the game to rise.

8. Do not shoot into moving bushes or in the direction of a noise without being sure the desired game is there and seeing it for certainty. The movement or noise may be caused by some person or by domestic stock.

9. Watch the muzzle of the gun that no mud, snow, or other material fills it; and do not load as heavily with white or nitro powder as with black powder. This may prevent accidents from bursting.

10. Do not start a fire in the woods without first providing against its spreading, and do not leave it burning under any circumstances.

11. Do not wound game and leave it to suffer and die of its injuries. Better to spend an hour searching for a winged bird than to let it remain and suffer for a day or two before relieved by a merciful death.

12. Do not shoot protected birds or animals. There is a reason for protecting them. Find what it is and you will agree that the law is generally correct in giving them a protective season.

13. If you are going for fun only it is all right to take inexperienced friends, a well-filled lunch basket, literature and a target and go to the nearest grove.

14. If going for game, go alone or with experienced hunters, only, carry only what is essential. Hunt with the back to the sun, slowly and quietly, and in such places and at such time of day as experience has taught that the particular kind of game sought is to be found.

15. Do not hunt for "anything." This generally results in nothing. Different kinds of game are to be found in different places and at varying times of day, according to the species sought. Decide before starting out as to the kind of game to be hunted and the region to be visited.

16. Ascertain if farms or premises are "posted" or hunting is forbidden, and keep out of trouble by either avoiding them or by asking the owners for permission to hunt on those portions where no damage to live-stock may result.

17. If fences are knocked down in climbing over them take time to fix them up properly. Leave gates and bars just as they are found. If open, leave them so, as that is evidently what the owner wants, but if closed be sure to close and fasten them as before.

18. Be satisfied with a fair share of game, and do not try to exceed the legal limit or to kill all that may be there just because it may be there.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

President Taft, last Thursday, issued the annual Thanksgiving Day proclamation. It is as follows:

"A God-fearing nation, like ours, owes it to its inborn and sincere sense of moral duty to testify its devout gratitude to the All-Giver for the countless benefits it has enjoyed. For many years it has been customary at the close of the year for the national executive to call upon his fellow countrymen to offer praise and thanks to God for the manifold blessings vouchsafed to them in the past and to unite in earnest supplication for their continuance.

"The year now drawing to a close has been notably favorable to our fortunate land. At peace within and without, free from the perturbations and calamities which have afflicted other peoples, rich in harvests so abundant, and in industries so productive that the overflow of our prosperity has advantaged the whole world; strong in the steadfast conservatism of the heritage of self-government bequeathed to us by our fathers, and firm in the resolve to transmit our heritage unimpaired, but rather improved by good use, to our children and our children's children for all time to come, the people of this country have abundant cause for contented gratitude.

"Wherefore I, WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT, President of the United States of America, in pursuance of long-established usage, and in response to the wish of the American people, invite my countrymen, wherever they may be, to join, on Thursday, the 28th day of this month of November, in appropriate expressions of praise and thanks to God for the good gifts that have been our portion, and in humble prayer that His great mercies toward us may endure."

What Would You Do?

Luxury on Shipboard.

Sumptuously furnished vessels were known centuries ago. The ship that Archimedes designed for Hiero II., king of Syracuse, not only was wonderfully decorated—the story of the illud was told in antiquity, but there were flower beds on the promenade deck, a gymnasium, staterooms with three beds, a library, bathroom with hot and cold water, stables and horses, fish ponds and many fair rooms paved with agate and precious stones. And this vessel was designed as a carrier of wheat. It was first named the Syracusan, but afterward the Alexandrian. Archimedes wrote a poem in its honor, and Hiero, in gratitude and appreciation, sent him a thousand measures of cheese and thoughtfully prepaid the expense. Moschion gives a detailed description of this ship. Then there was the Egyptian vessel, the Joy of Ptolemy Philopator, with galleries and promenades, a temple of Venus with her statue, a drinking hall, belvedere, a grotto the sides of which were decorated with precious stones set in ornaments of gold.—Boston Herald.

Real Optimism.

"What a grand old world this is! Have you ever seen a more perfect day than this?"

"Has your salary been raised?"

"No."

"New boy at your house?"

"Oh, no; nothing like that."

"Perhaps you have received word that you are heir to a fortune?"

"Nothing of that kind has happened to me."

"Perhaps you have written a play that somebody has accepted for a production?"

"I'm not a writer. Why do you make such a suggestion?"

"I'm just trying to figure out why you think the world is so grand and the day so beautiful."

"Oh, you're one of those who can't understand why one may be optimistic without having some material reason for it, eh? By the way, I've just sold my house for $2,500 more than I paid for it eight months ago."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Frog Egg Curiosities.

Frog's eggs are laid before they really become eggs in the true sense of that word. They are always laid under water and when first deposited are covered with a sort of envelope in the shape of a thin membrane. In this shape they are very small, but as soon as they come in contact with the water they rapidly absorb that element and in so doing go through a queer transformation. The thin membrane containing the little seedlike eggs is quickly changed into great lumps of a clear jelly-like substance, each section joined to the other, the whole forming a string from a few inches to several feet in length. On the inside of each of these lumps of jelly the eggs come to perfection and in due course of time add their quota to the frog population of the world.

Defense of Literature.

Thackeray was a past patron of the royal literary fund and frequently appeared at its annual dinners. It was at one of these dinners—on May 14, 1851—that the novelist made a noble vindication of the dignity of letters. "We don't want patrons," he said, "we want friends, and I thank God we have them. And as for any idea that our calling is despised by the world, I do, for my part, protest against and deny the whole statement. I have been in all sorts of society in this world, and I have never been despised that I know of. I don't believe there has been a literary man of the slightest merit or of the slightest mark who did not greatly advance himself by his literary labors." * * * And therefore I say don't let us be puffed any more."

Fishing for Sheep.

When sheep were first introduced into Cornwall, England, a flock which had strayed from the uplands on to Gwibian sands were caught there by the tide and ultimately carried into St. Ives bay during the night. There the floating flock was observed from the St. Ives fishing boats, whose crews, never having seen sheep, took them for some new kind of fish and did their best to secure them both by hooks and lines and by netting. Those they secured they brought home triumphantly next morning as a catch to which even pilehounds were as nothing.

Reminiscences.

"Do you remember the way you used to write the same wise sentence over and over again in your copybook?"

"Yes," replied the politician. "Those were the happy days. You weren't afraid somebody was going to die or something you had scribbled off in an idle moment and use it against you in a campaign."—Washington Star.

FARM FOR SALE.

The undersigned executor of John Hammers, dec'd, late of Highland township, Pa., will sell at private sale the farm 3 1/2 miles west of Gettysburg, Pa., called the Sunnyside Farm, containing about 100 acres of land, about 80 acres of land clear as any garden, the rest in young tall timber, poplar, oak and hickory. This farm can be bought cheap. Part of the money can remain in the place. The interest in 20 acres of growing grain can go with the place. Fruit experts say there is no land within the State better adapted for a fruit farm than this. This farm planted in apple and peach trees would bring $10,000 in a few years. If not sold by the first of Jan., 1913, for rent. Farmers all around this asking from $2,000 to $3,000 more than asked for this farm. This farm produces a good crop without lime and fertilizers as many farms of like size with, which speaks well for the soil.
